1. Parties and insured

This fictional sample policy is issued by Cedar Harbor Mutual Life Company (fictional) (Insurer) to the policy owner identified in a completed application (Owner) on the life of Morgan Example (Insured), a fictional person. The sample assumes a 35-year-old, non-smoking applicant at issue solely to provide context; no underwriting class or insurability is represented.

2. Coverage and benefit

The stated base death benefit is $500,000 stated base death benefit, subject to policy terms, any outstanding policy debt, and in-force status. The beneficiary designated by the Owner may claim the benefit after the Insurer receives satisfactory proof of death and any required claim forms. The Insurer will pay the amount determined under the issued policy, which may be adjusted for unpaid premiums, policy loans, withdrawals, or other contract provisions. No real person is insured by this sample.

3. Premium and policy status

Sample premium: $425.00 per month for 20 years (240 scheduled monthly premiums); this is a fictional sample amount, not a quote. Premiums must be paid as stated in an actual issued contract to keep coverage in force, subject to any applicable grace period and other policy provisions. The quoted sample premium is fictional and is not an estimate, offer, or guarantee of availability or price. The actual premium depends on underwriting, age, product availability, and jurisdiction.

4. Duration and continuation

Designed to provide lifetime coverage while the policy remains in force, subject to the contract This is not a renewable term policy. Coverage is intended to continue after the scheduled 20-year premium period if all required premiums have been paid and the policy remains in force under its terms.

5. Cash value and policy loans

The policy may build guaranteed cash value according to the insurer?s issued contract schedule. Any non-guaranteed dividends or other values are not promised. Loans or withdrawals may reduce cash value and the amount payable at death and may cause tax consequences.

6. Beneficiaries and ownership

The Owner may name one or more beneficiaries and may request a change by following the Insurer?s procedures, subject to any irrevocable designation, assignment, or applicable law. The Owner controls policy rights while living, subject to the contract and any valid assignment. No beneficiary is designated in this sample.

7. Grace period and lapse

A final policy would specify its grace period for a premium not paid when due and the notices required before termination. If coverage lapses, no death benefit is payable for a death after lapse, except to the extent the final contract or applicable law provides otherwise. Reinstatement, if available, may require evidence of insurability and payment of overdue amounts.

8. Exclusions and contestability

The final policy will state any exclusions, limitations, suicide provision, contestability period, and applicable exceptions. These provisions vary by product and jurisdiction; none should be inferred from this sample. The Insurer?s rights and the Owner?s protections are controlled by the issued contract and applicable law.

9. Claims and notices

A claimant should notify the Insurer and provide the proof and forms required by the issued contract. The Insurer will review the claim and pay or explain its determination within applicable legal deadlines. Contact information, claim forms, deadlines, and service addresses are intentionally omitted from this fictional sample.

10. Entire contract; illustrative status

An actual policy would consist of the issued policy, application, endorsements, and riders, if any. This sample is an educational comparison document only; it is not an insurance policy, binder, offer, quote, coverage confirmation, legal advice, or application. It creates no insurance coverage. Terms shown are generic and illustrative, not jurisdiction-specific. Only a properly issued contract from a licensed insurer can establish coverage.
